"There are no difficulties which will not yield to perseverance."

never live above your income.

Friends are a humbug. Friendship! What is its worth? Interest its basis and its superstructure.

Aug:

14 Genl: Sherry in command of some five hundred Men arrived here, left in the morning for the Indian Regions, a great excitement prevailing here all the time, Soldiers pressed some hundreds of Dollars worth of Goods of all description, out of the Store. (all lost -) The town full of families, great scarcity of provisions, Stealing & robbing, (under the pretence of orders from head quarters;) is all the go.

16 To-day it was quite cold, so much so to have the doors open; (people still excited.)

Father's age 72.

July

22 (Sunday) Father was struck with "Paralysis" at about 1 o'clock to-day, while in the garden, not found until 4 in the Evening, almost dead - his left side is lame, (face drawn ~~to~~ left side -

24 Father up to-day, getting better, think it was only weakness, does not like to speak of the occurrence. Mind very weak, very forgetful. -

25 Mr Magill's Mother (aged) died last night at "11" age 74, of "Paralysis" in the right side, sick about 10 days.

In these days of moving and house-cleaning and general indoor renovation there is one part of the house that should not be overlooked. That is the cellar, in which too often darkness covers a multitude of evils. No part of the house needs more thorough overhauling. Coal-dust and other dirt have accumulated, and frequently vegetables have been scattered through carelessness and have begun to decay. The whole place should be carefully cleansed, and then the wise householder will have the walls whitewashed with lime in which copperas has been dissolved freely. This will destroy disease germs, if any exist, and make the cellar sweet and clean and wholesome; and those who have tried it say that rats and mice will not invade a house where the foundation walls have been treated in this way.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIS

Combined Square, Plumb, Level and Bevel.

The Scientific American says: "This instrument is intended to supersede a number of separate tools used in the shop of the mechanic. It is used as a spirit level, try-square, clinometer, bevel protractor, etc., and is suitable for the machinist, wood-worker, draftsman, and surveyor.

The instrument is a rectangular metallic frame or box, on the sides of which are secured graded semicircles. In the top is seated the tube of a spirit level. Pivoted at the center near the bottom is a steel frame with heart-shaped apertures in its side to permit the figures on the scale to be seen when the frame is set at any angle. A thumb-screw with a sliding block secures the pivoted frame in any position desired. The whole instrument is capable of being carried in the pocket, and being wholly of metal—steel and brass—will not be easily broken.

The machinist will find it handy in finishing up six square nuts, in setting the planer head to cut bevels, and in various other operations. The pattern maker can record the angles of his work by its means so that the finisher can work exact to the original design or pattern. The carpenter and joiner can employ it in laying out their work and also in fitting it. It is also a handy article for the use of engineers, surveyors, and others who may be employed in running lines or locating claims." For particulars, address
